1 that the balance of equities tips in favor of plaintiff, and 2 that the injunction is in the public interest.

3 The question of likelihood of success is obviously 4 complex in any case, but particularly so in this one, involving 5 the claim of copyright infringement. While there is no doubt
6 that the Plaintiff owns the copyrights, and I believe there is 7 no doubt that, well, that Interplay concedes that in some 8 fashion it's using them in the development of the Fallout MMOG
9 because it believes it has the right to do so.

10 Beyond that, however, things get very, very 11 complicated. First, there is the contract interpretation
12 question, beginning, of course, with the documents themselves, 13 and the law. I believe we've agreed it's Delaware law that 14 we're applying, based on the agreements themselves, and whether 15 the fact finder ultimately goes beyond just the language there.

16 We've had a discussion in the context of the Motion
17 to Dismiss as to where we are at that point. If the fact 18 finder goes beyond the four corners of the two documents, how 19 far beyond, whether it's the License Agreement that was 20 superseded, or whether the fact finder gets beyond that 21 obviously makes things much, much more complex.

22 I will acknowledge that I believe the Plaintiff has 23 some chance of success. How much is hard to quantify. The 24 Asset Purchase Agreement makes clear that the copyrighted
25 material was sold, and the Trademark License Agreement at best
